BIOLOGICAL ACTIVITY

Description	BB-Cl-Amidine is a peptidylarginine deminase (PAD) inhibitor.
IC ₅₀ & Target	PAD ^[1] .
In Vivo	Treatment with BB-Cl-amidine subtly reduces splenomegaly in MRL/lpr mice, while there is a trend towards increased circulating levels of anti-NET antibodies with PAD inhibitor treatment. However, neither PAD inhibitor affected body weight or total IgG levels. Indeed, treatment with both Cl-amidine and BB-Cl-amidine significantly improves endothelium-dependent vasorelaxation. The BB-Cl-amidine group also shows a strong trend towards downregulation of IRGs. Treatment with either Cl-amidine or BB-Cl-amidine significantly improves muzzle alopecia, in many cases preventing it entirely ^[1] .

MCE has not independently confirmed the accuracy of these methods. They are for reference only.

Animal Model:	MRL/lpr mice ^[1] .
Dosage:	1 mg/kg.
Administration:	Subcutaneous injection daily from 8 to 14 weeks of age.
Result:	Significantly improved endothelium-dependent vasorelaxation and showed a strong trend towards downregulation of IRGs.
